How to say i love french in french

If you're lucky enough to have the time to learn the language of French, then you are truly learning one of the most romantic languages in the world. So it is essential that you know how to express your feelings of love to your loved one. Of course, with French there are several ways to tell someone how you feel and get lost in the romance of this language. Saying I love you in French If you would like to be straight up with no messing around, then the verb aimer (to like/love) is the one to use. This is the most direct way to profess your love for someone. But watch out as the verb aimer (to like/love) is the one to use. you want to say you like someone (rather than you love them) simply add an adverb. Je t'aime beaucoup - I am fond of you or I like you a lot (as a friend) More ways to express your love in French If you're feeling a little coy and would like to suss out the situation first before diving right in with "I love you", try this one out. Tu comptes tant pour moi - You mean so much to me. Perhaps a little more vague, but it does bring you closer to express your love in a beautiful, poetic way then this one might be more up your alley. Les mots ne peuvent pas décrire mon amour pour toi - Words can't describe my love for you. It's a bit of a mouthful but it will definitely get your message across. Two simpler yet equally emotive phrases for expressing your love would be the following. Je t'adore - I adore you Je te desire - I want you Terms of endearment in French So you now know how to say I love you. Why not spice it up with a term of endearment? The french language is extremely creative and inventive when it comes to expressing affection, love and regards for someone. Below is a selection of words you can use from regular love to animals to even food. mon amour - my love mon cher/ ma chère - my dear mon bébé - my baby mon beau/ ma belle - my beautiful mon mignon - my cutie mon cœur - my heart mon trésor - my heart mon chou - my duck mon chou - my heart mon cochon - my heart mon chou endearment - not with your gender or the gender of the person you're expressing love to. Also worth noting is that generally speaking, masculine terms of endearment can be used for both men and women, while feminine ones can only be used for women. Celebrities Who Speak French How to say "to be in love" with someone This phrase is extremely particular. It means to be in love with someone and not to like someone. So be sure you know what you're saying before you say it. Also note there is a male and female version of the word amour, depending your gender. Not the gender of the person you are in love with. Amoureux for men. Amoureux for women. être amoureux / amoureuse de quelqu'un Par exemple (For example): Il est amoureux d'elle/lui - He is in love with her/him Sophie est amoureuse de Pierre/Céline - Sophie is in love with Peter/Céline Best French Jokes: What Are The French Laughing At? Some additional words around the topic of love Now, you're all set for telling someone you love them, you like them and even you're in love with them. There are many other delightful words that are worth learning around the topic of love. Here is a wide selection for you. le coup de foudre - I love you too Veux tu m'épouser - Will you marry me? embrasser quelqu'un - to kiss Sortir avec - to date (Je sors avec lui = I am dating him) Se fiancer à (or avec) - to get engagement les noces - wedding l'anniversaire de mariage - wedding anniversary. le mariage - marriage tomber amoureux/euse de - to fall in love with (je tombe amoureux/euse de toi = I am falling in love with you) Comment vont tes amours? - How's your love life? Avec plaisir! - I'd love to! Je ne le ferais pour rien au monde - I wouldn't do it for love of it Entre eux, ce n'est pas le grand amour -There's not love lost between them So, now you have the vocabulary, it's time to tell your long, lost love what you really think! Reading Time: 2 minutes French is sometimes referred to as the language of love, so it's no surprise that how to say "I love you" is one of the most commonly requested Google translate phrases. However, like any expression that involves communicating emotion, it's not as simple as translating French to English or vice versa. To avoid inadvertently committing a faux pas, understanding the nuances of the French language will help you determine which expression of devotion is appropriate for your romantic situation. If you're in a relationship, the words you might use to describe a fledging affection in French would be quite different from those you'd choose to communicate profound, abiding commitment. From the simple to the sophisticated, here are five different ways to capture the sentiment of romantic love in French This statement is quite literally "I love you," and is the most common expression you'll hear being used, especially in movies and French cultural references. However, listen carefully because there are some close variations to the phrase that could imply a slightly different level of emotion. Not in love just yet? Go for Je t'aime beaucoup We just barely told you that je t'aime is "I love you," but there is a caveat. The French verb aimer can be both "like" or "love" depending on the context and the words that follow the phrase. Saying je t'aime but then adding an adverb like beaucoup, it doesn't mean "I love you very much" but "I like you very much." This dual meaning can be confusing for English speakers, so it's vital to learn French phrases in context so you'll better understand the right situation. Capture your passion with an idiomatic expression like coup de foudre translates to "bolt of lightning" and is intended to convey that surge of interest and passion many experience in the first stages of love. Or, as some ardent French believe, coup de foudre can capture the zing of love at first stages of love.
