Talking cat Thomas had a new competitor - a parrot who also possesses the same quality - ability to talk, to be exact to repeat told in a microphone. Unlike Tom, Ben and other animals from "talking" series, Pierre doesn't repeat the word at once. He listens to you as a real parrot, and then cries out told by you in a casual order with an amusing voice. He also differently reacts to strokings on a stomach, a pushing on the head. If to stick him on legs, he will dance amusing dance, if to press an icon of the broken cup, the parrot continues an initiative - will start pulling everything down and breaking. Except all this, there is an opportunity to throw a tomato in him. Well, and at last, you can write down all this on video and subsequently send to Youtube, Facebook or by mail. You definitely know Talking Tom and the rest of the speaking animal apps from the same developers, including the dogs Ben and Hank or the cat Angela. We were obviously missing one of the most talkative animals out there in this range of apps: a parrot. Pierre the parrot's app In Talking Pierre you can play with a naughty parrot capable of scattering rubbish, playing around with a blender or even playing the notes of Deep Purple's Smoke on the Water on the guitar. The system is exactly the same as the rest of the apps: tap the animal or the different elements on the screen to see how he reacts. Unlike the rest of the apps, as is the case of Talking Tome, we're talking about a game with fewer functions as there aren't any mini-games or virtual pet functions. These are the main functions of this app: Talk to Pierre and make him repeat what you say. Try to hit him with tomatoes. Make him throw the cutlery and scatter rubbish. Make him move by rubbing his belly or tapping other parts of his body. Download Now Talking Pierre is within the house! ar you prepared for a few wonderful stringed instrument shredding?
